Are YOU in high school? Are YOU interested in science?

Offered at universities nationwide, Discovery Days are events that encourage teens to explore exciting careers in the health sciences. Each year, a select group of students from your school are chosen to join hundreds of others who are curious about medicine and science to attend. This event includes a keynote lecture by a leader in the health community, two interactive workshop opportunities of choice from a catalogue of options and a career panel discussion, all offering a glimpse into the many opportunities in medicine and health sciences.

"I LOVED Discovery Days because it gave me a sneak peak into the health sciences. This program made me fall in love with medical sciences all over again."
